

The Open Space Program – A Delaware Success Story

By John Schroeder

Holts Landing State Park by Mark Miller

The primary mission of the Open Space Program (OSP) is to protect and conserve all forms of natural and cultural resources, protect plant and wildlife habitat, connect existing open spaces, expand existing parks, provide outdoor recreation and allow for water conservation. It is a responsibility that members of the Open Space Council (OSC) from 1990 to 2017 have embraced. Working in partnership with the DNREC, council members have thoughtfully and prudently used State funds to permanently preserve lands for all residents and visitors to enjoy. This is a true success story and an amazing legacy all Delawarean's should be proud to acknowledge.

The OSP has helped preserve nearly 60,000 acres in over 400 projects in all three counties, which provides residents and visitors with the maximum opportunity to enjoy our outdoors as well as our historic sites. Most importantly, practically all of this acreage has been acquired fee-simple, providing access to everyone. The acquisition of land or buildings is the responsibility of the OSC, a 9-member group that meets quarterly and analyzes potential acquisitions in order to advise the Secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control (DNREC).

One of the hallmarks of the program is the fact that the OSP is completely voluntary. While the OSC recognizes the importance of preserving our most vulnerable natural resources and historic sites, it only pursues mutually agreeable relationships with willing property owners. Moreover, in 88 cases, these relationships resulted in 3,702 acres of donated land, with an estimated value of $46 million. Partnerships have played an integral part in the success of the OSP. Since 1990 the federal government and private organizations have provided $96 million to assist in land preservation - a significant contribution to our land preservation efforts. Leveraging these partnerships will become even more critical in today's economy.

For multiple reasons, it is no surprise thousands of people are relocating or retiring to our State. And like all Delawarean's who appreciate the quality of life found in the First State, they desire open spaces to recreate. This continuously growing demand on existing natural resources is clear evidence of the urgency to diligently protect our vulnerable resources. Twenty-seven years ago the Delaware General Assembly created the Open Space Program, a unique and visionary program, with a responsibility to protect and conserve our precious natural and cultural resources. Today, the Open Space Program is recognized as a true Delaware success story –touching the lives of all us when we spend time hiking, biking, fishing, camping and hunting.

INTRODUCTION AND BACKGROUND

Parks, open space, natural areas, forests, wildlife habitat, greenways, and waterways are all part of Delaware's environmental legacy – a legacy which is part of everyone's quality of life. Delaware's outdoors provide not only a haven for wildlife and native plants, but also a retreat and escape from the work-a-day world and an opportunity for healthy recreational activities.

Delaware's Open Space Program coordinates the acquisition of each of these parts of the landscape by expanding state parks and preserves, fish and wildlife areas, state forests and cultural resource sites. These management areas include some of the finest examples of Delaware's diverse natural and cultural heritage.

For almost 90 years the State has been actively involved in the land protection business. In 1927 the Forestry Commission paid $100 for 58 acres, known as the Appenzeller Tract, to begin Redden State Forest. In 1932 the Board of Game and Fish Commissioners acquired 3.5 acres at Raccoon Pond as the first of many acres of state ponds and wildlife areas. In 1947 the U.S. Government turned over Fort Delaware to the State Parks Commission, turning it into a state park in 1951.

From the 1950s through the early 1980s additional lands were purchased using special State legislative appropriations and Federal grants; namely through the Dingell-Johnson Act for fisheries, the Pittman-Robertson Act for wildlife and the Land and Water Conservation Fund for outdoor recreation. In addition the federal grants required a match of state dollars in order to receive the federal dollars. All of these sources varied from year to year in the amount of available funding. In the 1980s there was a major decrease in federal funds. There was a need for a more stable source of open space funds.

In 1986 a Delaware Land and Water Conservation Trust Fund was started with private donations and limited state funds. It was patterned after the federal program by establishing a permanent trust fund to support state and local open space and recreation needs.

Delaware citizens also were becoming more aware of the need to protect land and began asking questions like what properties should be purchased and where was the money coming from. In addition, up until this time the actual process of acquiring a piece of property required a separate piece of legislation, which sometimes became embroiled in the political process.

To address these concerns and others, in 1987 then-Governor Castle established a 3-year, $21 million state program, known as the Governor's Land Acquisition Program. This targeted for protection the State's top 11 open space properties. An oversight committee was formed and acquisition dollars were placed in the State Trust Fund. Eventually, eight of the original 11 properties were purchased.

During this same time an Environmental Legacy Report was produced. This document addressed many statewide planning and land use issues within the context of increasing development throughout the state. Included in this report was the recognition of the need for State agencies to work together around a coordinated, systematic approach to land acquisition, with an adequate and reliable funding source. One spinoff from this report was the "Greenspace for Delaware's Future" document. This characterized lands of state significance based on increasing science-backed information about the landscape and it established an early rating system for individual properties.

With the support of over 300 conservation and civic organizations throughout the state, and using the "Greenspace for Delaware's Future" as a reference document, two companion pieces of legislation passed and were signed into law in July 1990. These laws established the framework for the Open Space Program, that was to be administered by the Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control, and provided a funding mechanism to implement this conservation program.

The first law, the Land Protection Act (7 Del. C. Chapter 75), laid out the method for prioritizing and preserving conservation and recreation lands. The law underwent a major makeover in 2016, keeping many elements of the original and adding new components.

Some key points are:

Purpose of the Land Protection Act (7 Del. C. § 7503(a)):

1. To protect and conserve all forms of natural and cultural resources.
2. To protect and conserve the biological diversity of plants and animals and their habitat.
3. To protect or expand existing or planned parks, forests, wildlife areas, nature preserves or other recreation, conservation or cultural sites.
4. To preserve sites of special natural, cultural, or geological interest.
5. To connect existing open spaces into a cohesive system of greenways and resource areas.
6. To provide for public outdoor recreation.
7. To allow for water resource conservation.

Voluntary Permanent Protection (7 Del. C. § 7503(b)):

There is no right of eminent domain or condemnation under this law. All protection efforts are through cooperation with willing landowners.

Open Space Council (7 Del. C. § 7505):

It established a nine member Open Space Council which advises the Secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control as to the implementation and financing of the program and recommends specific land purchases. The Council (seven members of the public and one member of the State Senate and one member of the House of Representatives) holds public meetings four times a year to review properties for consideration for acquisition. The current Open Space Council is in the Appendix.

The properties are first evaluated by the four State agencies eligible for funding under the Open Space Program (7 Del. C. § 7504). These State agencies are:

1. Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control - Division of Parks and Recreation and Division of Fish and Wildlife
2. Department of State - Division of Historical and Cultural Affairs
3. Department of Agriculture - Delaware Forest Service

Recommendations are based on a review of ecological, land use, cultural/historical, water features, and recreation attributes and a descriptive evaluation and project-specific questions (7 Del. C. § 7507A). Staff presents the information gathered from the review process to the Open Space Council when presenting a project. The property review process in the Appendix is being reviewed pursuant to 29 Del. C. Chapter 101.

Open Space Program Plan (7 Del. C. § 7506(3)):

A new component to the Land Protection Act is the creation of a program plan to be developed by the Council with public and State agency input. The plan is to include strategies, goals and priorities for the use of funds and to analyze innovative methods of securing the permanent protection of open space lands.

Protected Land Maps (7 Del. C. § 7507A(c)):

Another new component is maps for each county, showing lands protected by public entities and private land preservation organizations are to be available on the Department's website. These maps will be used to guide the deliberations of the Council and the State agencies.

The second piece of legislation provided a structure for funding the protection efforts. This was a new subchapter to the Realty Transfer Tax Act (30 Del. C. Chapter 54, Subchapter II). This expanded on the previously established Delaware Land and Water Conservation Trust Fund. The Trust Fund became a mechanism to receive funding, invest it and allocate the interest generated on the principal for open space projects and matching grants for local government projects. This legislation also states that any land purchased with open space funds is to remain in public outdoor recreation and conservation use in perpetuity.

Through a combination of revenue bond sales, State appropriations and rollover of excess interest on the realty transfer tax, over $40 million was directly available for Open Space projects from 1991 – 1995. With a strong economy at the time, additional funds from a court settlement with the State of New York over unclaimed dividend and interest payments on securities, and citizen and legislative support, the Open Space Program received significant funds for purchasing more conservation lands from 1996 - 2000. During this same time the principal of the Trust Fund grew from appropriations and realty transfer taxes.

As the state continued to develop and its population increased, and success in conserving open space lands was supported, in 2001 the law was changed to designate annually from the realty transfer tax $1 million to the principal of the Trust Fund and $9 million for Open Space projects. The idea was that when people buy and sell property, particularly for housing or commercial uses, that a small portion of the realty transfer tax should go to the Open Space Program to help preserve conservation lands.

With the national and state economic downturn in 2008, the moderate recovery to date and the need to overcome the loss of federal funds for mandated programs, the realty transfer tax revenue has often been reallocated over the past few years. For fiscal year 2009 through fiscal year 2017 (nine years) the Open Space Program received its legislatively-directed annual funding of $9 million only two times. For the last two fiscal years the Open Space Program received zero funds from the realty transfer tax.

The interest generated by the investment of the principal of the Trust Fund also declined during this same time. In response to this loss of revenue for state and local programs, the Realty Transfer Tax Act was revised again in 2014. The principal of the Trust Fund and the realty transfer taxes allocated to the Open Space Program are now invested in a more competitive way with the approval of the State's Cash Management Policy Board. The current version of the law is in the Appendix.

The following is a summary of the major funding sources for the Open Space Program. A more detailed summary is in the Appendix.

Open Space Program Fund Summary July 1990 – June 2016

Table 1: Summary Report

The Open Space Program seeks to leverage its available funds with any appropriate federal grants, private foundation support, or private conservation organization monies. Much of the success to date is through the generous support of all of these partners. In latter parts of this report these leveraged sources, in part, are referred to as non-Open Space funds. The Open Space Program also acknowledges the continuing support of the Delaware citizens, General Assembly and administrations. Ultimately, the Open Space Program's success is due to the willingness of landowners to trust in and work with the Open Space Council and dedicated staff through the 26 years of the program.

OPEN SPACE PROGRAM PROJECT MAPS

The Open Space Program Project Maps present all of the 432 projects sorted by management areas. The mapped properties correlate with the Open Space Inventory reports noted earlier. Only those State management areas that involved an open space project are featured. Therefore, if a State management area did not increase in acreage due to the Open Space Program, then it is not included in the maps. Also these maps do not include Federal, county, municipal or private conservation organization lands, unless encumbered by a State-held conservation easement. The aerial photography is from 2012 and shapes are from survey and parcel data.

County Maps

Three 3-color scheme maps with selected municipality locations

- Purple - projects from July 1990 through June 2016; includes fee simple purchases and conservation easements.
- Green - State management areas prior to 1990.
- Blue - properties acquired from 1990 – 2016 without involvement of the Open Space Program; included because of relevance to the overall management area and to the open space projects.

Management Area Maps

Thirty seven 4-color scheme maps with selected road numbers; organized geographically from north to south and west to east within the county.

- Purple - projects from July 1990 through June 2011; includes fee simple purchases and conservation easements.
- Green - State management areas prior to 1990.
- Blue - properties acquired from 1990 – 2016 without involvement of the Open Space Program; included because of their relevance to the overall management area and to the open space projects.
- Yellow - projects for the last five years from July 2011 through June 2016.
- Gray diagonal lines – conservation easements; underlying color provides year context.

Project Descriptions

A brief description for each of the 74 projects for the last five years (July 2011 – June 2016; yellow shapes) is provided after the maps. These projects are numbered on the maps and follow the same geographical organization within a county (north to south, west to east).

OPEN SPACE PROGRAM

PROPERTY REVIEW PROCESS

As established by the Delaware Land Protection Act, the Open Space Program is to acquire interest in real property to carry out conservation programs of the State. Under the purpose of the law, the State is “to protect and conserve all forms of natural and cultural resources; to protect and conserve the biological diversity of plants and animals and their habitat; to protect or expand existing or planned parks, forests, wildlife areas, nature preserves or other recreation, conservation or cultural sites; to preserve sites of special natural, cultural or geological interest; to connect existing open spaces into a cohesive system of greenways and resource areas; to provide for public outdoor recreation; and to allow for water resource conservation.”.

In order to carry out the purpose of the Open Space Program, the Open Space Council is to review and recommend to the Secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control for adoption a process that establishes land preservation priorities. Typically working in a constrained environment of limited funding, the process is intended to provide a strategic way of preserving open space by evaluating a property on its own features and against other properties in order to maximize resource benefits and leverage all relevant funding sources.

Any property proposed for preservation is first screened by the following state land managing agencies for any specific interest: Division of Fish and Wildlife (Wildlife Areas and Natural Heritage sites), Division of Parks and Recreation (State Parks, Natural Areas and Nature Preserves), Delaware National Estuarine Research Reserve, Delaware Forest Service (State Forests and Forest Legacy Areas), or Division of Historical and Cultural Affairs. Typically a property of interest is an inholding to, expansion of or connection between lands protected or managed by these agencies. Additionally a property of interest may be a stand-alone site that contains critical resources. The property is also reviewed against resource plans or resource analyses, including the Delaware Ecological Network<sup>1</sup>.

Assessing the priority of a given property for preservation, either through fee-simple acquisition, donation or conservation easement is a process that involves ranking and descriptive evaluation. The review process is supported by science, management priorities and public needs. The ranking criteria assign points across five broad areas: ecological value, land use, water quality, recreation, and cultural resources. Once ranked, a property is evaluated qualitatively by describing other potential benefits, challenges or factors affecting preservation of the property.
